Janice Hellens

To whom it may concern,
With regard to the review of hunting wild animals, worldwide animals and all wildlife are at the mercy of humanity.
We are having to lock animals up in zoos to protect them from us, how ironic.
We have no real need to hunt any animal, as food is in abundance, and we don't eat foxes.
So is the hunting solely for the entertainment of the humans?
In which case this review must surely fall on the side to protect the wildlife from people.
We show time and again we cannot be trusted, legislation in favour of wildlife is a start of a balanced turnaround for people.
A change of mind heart is needed, if we look closely at what actually happens in a hunt, then surely there can be no case for any hunting whatsoever.

Time is upon us to become guardians of life.
Ban hunting once and for all, let our nation be pioneers for the future of wildlife.

Yours faithfully
J. Hellens
