Dear Sir/Madam,

Firstly perhaps you will have some objection to "outsiders" attempting to influence your Scots traditions and laws....

I would counter that on two scores...I hold, that human attitudes and treatment of animals both domestic and wild is the responsibility of us all...If in one are barbaric and hugely cruel practices are upheld as a matter of sovereignty or some tradition...Those practices effect the entire human race.....Secondly and of far less importance...My sister lives and has her family in Scotland..She resides in Nairn.

So on these bases I would like to add my comments....I fervently hope that you would make all hunting by hounds as a "sport"illegal and end this particularly barbaric and horrific practice.

Man has a long way to go in understanding life on this Planet and has hardly scratched the surface of this study....All life is sacred and not unaware that humanity generally has an aptitude towards cruelty and a carelessness of others welfare...Particularly the "lower" animals...Lines need to be drawn by those with a measure of influence and having the good at heart!

Please therefore ban this activity!

Best regards and wishes,

Tony Bennion
