

From: Jane Clark
To: 2002 Act Review
Date: 31 March 2016 22:17:03

To whom it may concern

I am a partner in a farming business and also someone that has hunted for many years. In my opinion it would be detrimental to the countryside as a whole to ban the use of more than two dogs to flush foxes to guns. Using two dogs only to flush foxes will never work. As a person that has always lived in the countryside I understand The countryside and countryside conservation. There are many people who do not understand that we who live in the countryside manage the countryside and all all things that take place in the countryside. The explosion of the fox population would be very detrimental to the countryside. Many more lambs would be killed every year and the simple balance of nature would be changed. Nesting birds would be targeted by the larger fox population which in turn would lead to a decline in some species.

Jane Clark

This email was scanned by the Government Secure Intranet anti-virus service supplied by Vodafone in partnership with Symantec. (CCTM Certificate Number 2009/09/0052.) In case of problems, please call your organisations IT Helpdesk.

Communications via the GSi may be automatically logged, monitored and/or recorded for legal purposes.

This email has been received from an external party and has been swept for the presence of computer viruses.
