National Social Work Agency – what we want to happen

We think there should be:

- a National Social Work Agency and
- a place where research is done to get facts and figures to make social work better.

They should both be part of the National Care Service and be part of plans to make things better.

The National Social Work Agency would be in charge of:

- social work qualifications and social work students
- ways to support social work staff with planning, training and making things better
- ways for staff to keep learning new things
- pay and the different grades of pay for different jobs.

The pay and grades would be the same across Scotland.

The National Social Work Agency would support social workers to do their job well.

It would make sure social workers have good pay and work conditions.
